Many of the items listed in this catalogue are produced at New Brunswick's Speerville Flour Mill.

The Speerville Flour Mill was founded by Stu Fleischaker and George Berthault in 1982 with a mandate to provide a market for Maritime-produced grain and other products. Why was and does this continue to be so important? Because less than 1% of the cereals and flour products available for purchase in the Maritimes are actually grown and processed in this region!

The Speerville Flour Mill takes its role in promoting a regional food system and encouraging organic farming and a nutritious food supply very seriously. Speerville has always been a strong supporter of organic agriculture from the ground up—from working with farmers with production issues right through to marketing the results of their efforts.

You might find Speerville prices a bit higher than those of products from other mills and suppliers—this is because Speerville pays its farmers a fair price for their harvest. This is local fair trade in action, and is very heartening to see!

Speerville has grown from a small mill that produced basic flours and cereals to a bustling enterprise that now offers an enormous range of locally-grown whole grain products and quality foods from other organic sources. Speerville continues to support the local economy by helping build strong rural communities, and to that end will not ship its products outside the Maritime region.

I encourage you to support the Speerville Flour Mill—a company that has been doing the right thing from the very beginning—by purchasing their products over those from further afar whenever possible. Hurray for regional sustainability!

FLOUR, KERNELS, BRAN, GRAINS

Flour information from the Speerville Flour Mill www.speervilleflourmill.ca

- Speerville's Maritime-grown bread wheat is hard red spring wheat that is high in gluten and protein.
- Speerville's unbleached white flour contains 80% of the kernel and some of the germ, and has a beautiful golden colour. Good for transitioning from white to whole wheat flour, for a less-heavy baked product, and for all baking and cooking.
- Speerville's conventional whole white flour is a little darker in colour than commercial unbleached flours. With 85% of the original wheat kernel and wheat germ, it is nutritious and good for all baking and cooking.
- Speerville's whole wheat flour makes great bread, and works well as an all-purpose baking flour.
- Speerville's Maritime-grown pastry (soft) wheats are low in gluten and protein, and suitable for cakes, cookies and pie crusts.
- Red Fife heritage wheat, the parent variety of all modern wheat now grown in Canada, once verged on extinction, but has been revived by Speerville's Maritime growers. Many wheat-intolerant people find they can enjoy it without ill effect.
- Spelt is an ancient grain that goes way back in human history. Tolerated by many who cannot eat wheat, spelt is now becoming a favourite of many discerning bakers because of its light texture and unique flavour.
- Whole spelt flour can be used in any recipe to replace stoneground whole wheat flour. For yeast breads, be sure not to knead in too much extra flour to ensure a moist, delicious, nutty-flavoured end product.
- Light spelt flour, a sifted version of whole spelt flour that does not contain all the bran and germ, is a wonderful light flour for any baking. Good for introducing new bakers or hesitant whole grain eaters to spelt's unique flavour.
